

ABSTRACT

The present invention includes a convertible planter and fountain system. The system can readily be converted between a planter and a fountain using the same 5 container with removable elements to facilitate the conversion. The system also includes a hollow cavity formed between the exterior and interior portions of the container in which various elements can be mounted and concealed if desired. A pump provides water recirculation in the fountain mode through a water spout coupled to the pump.